Wright Planning For Royal Visitors

Work of preparing a hearty welcome for Their Majesties the King and Queen on their arrival here June 3rd, is now well under way. A committee of citizens has been busy engaged on this project for some weeks and their plans embrace not only a monster rally of children and adults at the station to greet the royal visitors, but also a full day's celebration for the entertainment of the crowds who will journey to Wainwright for this occasion.

Commencing with the arrival of the royal train at 8:55 a.m. and its departure 10 minutes later, the entire day has been set aside for a celebration which will include baseball, softball, basketball, horse racing and a midway with all the fun of the fair.

In view of the fact that accommodation at the station grounds is somewhat limited, the public is requested to arrive early before the train so that all may secure the best vantage point possible.

Anglican Minister Leaves, Edmonton

Owing to his having been moved to the vicarage of St. Peter's (Ang.) church in Edmonton, the Rev. P. A. Rickard, who has had charge of the parish of St. Thomas' here for the past two years, preached his farewell sermon on Sunday evening last.

At the close of the service, Mr. C. Forryan, people's warden, read an address to the reverend gentleman, expressing the regrets of the church members and adherents at losing both Mr. and Mrs. Rickard, and extending best wishes for their success in their new sphere. Mr. Rickard suitably replied and was then presented with a substantial purse on behalf of the parishioners, and also a gift on behalf of the Sunday school of the church.

Free Sewing Course Proves Very Popular

The free sewing course conducted during the past week in the Masonic Temple by the Singer Sewing Machine Co., has proved a popular attraction.

On Thursday 85 ladies registered and throughout the course an average of 78 per day has been recorded. The courses, held morning and afternoon, were very popular, and the hall was filled to capacity.

The course, which is entirely free, covers the latest fashion aids, finishes, etc., with the modern attachments. Much interest is being centred in the modern sewing machine, a Queen Anne model, which even sews on buttons.

The baby's layette, the boleros and the bedroom display received very favorable comments from the ladies, as did the other various displays.

Monday evening, being style consultation night, proved very popular, and the hall was filled to capacity.

Prizes will be given at the end of the session for the best sample books completed. Every lady interested in sewing is welcome to attend.

The courses, held morning and afternoon, were capably handled and supervised by Miss Jessie Arrowsmith, of the company's educational department. This lady has had great experience in this work, having conducted many of these classes in different parts of the four western provinces. Miss Arrowsmith is very capably assisted by Mr. Sampson, manager of the Vegreville branch, Mrs. Barber and Mr. Bob Barber, the Wainwright agent.

Beavers On

Night Shift

Coalgate, Alta.—The roadmaster on the Brule sub-division, Canadian National Railways, recently had "beaver trouble". These busy animals were partially blocking drainage at a culvert. An employee suggested hanging a lantern at the culvert at night to frighten the animals away. The roadmaster thought it was a good idea. Next morning he inspected the culvert, finding the beaver had apparently put on a night shift for they had done twice as much work as usual. The lantern plan was abandoned.

Mr. Pete Romo Dies in His Sleep

Following a lengthy illness, another old-timer in the person of Mr. Pete Romo passed away peacefully in his sleep on Friday morning last.

The late Mr. Romo was born in Norway in 1854 and as a young man came to America, settling in Rugby, North Dakota. There he married Miss Jennie Langland and of this union seven children were born, namely, Oscar, Rudolf and Joseph of Balmville, Montana; Martha, Marie and Ida of Chicago, Ill.; and Christina, of St. Louis, and all are left to mourn his passing. His wife predeceased him in 1906.

Three years later he married Miss Anna Lindholm and two children were born, Selmer and Pauline (Mrs. A. Glenn) both residing in this district. Mrs. Romo passed away in 1920, and the following year Mr. Romo and family moved to Wainwright, taking up a farm in the Sydenham district, where he resided till his death. Always taking an active part in the affairs of the community until ill health prevented. Mr. Romo will be greatly missed by his many friends and acquaintances.

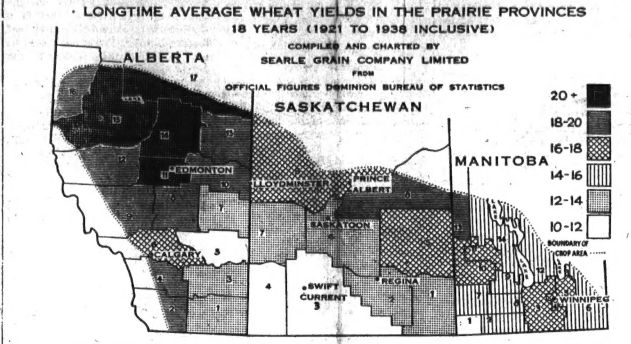

The deceased has been in ill health for the past three or four years and during the most of that time was bed-ridden. In his passing, The Star joins with the many friends throughout the district in expressing sympathy to the relatives in their sad loss.

THE FUNERAL was held on Monday afternoon from the United church, the pastor, Rev. E. Armstrong, B.A., B.D., delivering the address to a large audience who gathered to pay their last respects. Beautiful floral tributes were received from: The Family, Mrs. Glen and Ian, Simon and George Kelly, Mr. Ruete and Family, John S. Ruete, Mr. and Mrs. H. Mabey and Family, The Reynolds Family, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Egeland (St. Louis, Miss.), Mr. and Mrs. J. Nicholls, The Merricks, Mr. and Mrs. G. Haire, Mr. and Mrs. J. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. O. Croteau, Mr. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. F. Seabrook, Mr. and Mrs. L. Bean, Mr. and Mrs. T. Schick, Mr. and Mrs. P. Dixon.

McLeod's funeral parlors were in charge of arrangements and the following old friends of the family acted as pall-bearers: Messrs. W. Mackay, Harry Mabey, Simon Kelly, Hans Kelly, John Ruete and John S. Ruete. Interment was in the family plot in Wainwright cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of the late Mr. P. O. Romo wish to thank all friends for their kindness and sympathy during the long illness and passing away of a loving father; and especially for the beautiful floral tributes of love and respect.

LONGTIME AVERAGE WHEAT YIELDS IN THE PRAIRIE PROVINCES
18 YEARS (1921 TO 1938 INCLUSIVE)
COMPILED AND CHARTED BY
SEARLE GRAIN COMPANY LIMITED
FROM
OFFICIAL FIGURES DOMINION BUREAU OF STATISTICS

The map printed above shows the longtime average annual wheat yield for the past 18 years in the Prairie Provinces, for each crop district separately. The reason that 18 years has been chosen is that no official Dominion records are available by crop districts for a longer period than this.

The map shows at a glance that the large area of lower yields coincides very closely with what is called the semi-arid area of the West, or that area that is bounded by the famous Palliser line. Incidentally, as would of course be expected, this lower yield area also corresponds with the area that receives on the average a comparatively low annual precipitation.

Ann. Varsity Week Farm Young People

Farm young people's week at the University of Alberta will this year celebrate its twenty-first anniversary and it is expected that some 200 young men and women will gather in Edmonton during the first week of June. In retrospect, this annual event has proven one of the most successful projects of a provincial extension program unique for its scope and variety.

The committee has taken advantage of the circumstance of the royal visit to convene the week earlier this year to give the young people attending an opportunity of seeing Their Majesties when they pass through Edmonton on June 2nd. Arrival day is May 31st and departure day June 9th.

The eight days of the Conference will be busy ones with lectures, laboratory work, discussions, visits to points of interest, recreation and recitals, concluding with a sports day, banquet and dance.

For application forms, or any further information, apply to the Director of Extension, University of Alberta, Edmonton.

Ottawa Grant to Alberta Roads

An expenditure of $550,000 will be made in Alberta this year on the development of tourist highways, under the program now being considered by the Dominion and provincial authorities on a 50-50 basis.

The Regimental Commander expects to see every member of "A" Squadron who is actually on the strength of the Squadron, to attend the royal visit. "A" Squadron Commander also joins in this desire, for the honor of the Squadron, as well as the district, and each man can also consider the honor to himself in being given the opportunity of taking an active part on such a momentous occasion as a visit from Their Majesties the King and Queen.

A cordial invitation is given to all the young men of the district to attend these parades and follow the example of so many fine young fellows who are showing their interest in the defense of their country by joining and serving in the Canadian (Non-Permanent) Militia. Special Fares For Royal Visit

Canadian National Railways have arranged to make it easy for anyone in the Dominion to visit the cities which will be stopover points on the visit of Their Majesties, the King and Queen, during May and June. Special low coach fares have been authorized.

On their trip across Western Canada, Their Majesties, the King and Queen, will visit the Lakeshead May 23; Winnipeg and Brandon May 24; Regina, May 25; Calgary, May 26; Vancouver, May 29; Edmonton, June 2 and Saskatoon on June 5.

The royal party will be at Calgary and residents of Alberta and of certain nearby points in British Columbia may obtain the low fares on May 24, 25 and 26.

After a visit to the Pacific Coast, Their Majesties, the King and Queen will visit Edmonton and Saskatoon. Special fares will be available to Edmonton from all stations in Alberta on May 31, June 1 and 2, and to Saskatoon from all stations in Saskatchewan and from adjacent territory in Manitoba and Alberta on June 1, 2 and 3.

Mr. Max Ulich, who some time ago farmed north of Fabyan, was here last week on a visit to friends.

Last week end saw Mr. Hugh Little moving away to his new location at the Bluffs, where we understand he will be in business with Mr. A. Howarth, formerly of Wainwright.

Mr. Art Dupre was in town on business last week end.

Having enjoyed his annual holiday at the coast, Mr. E. Beasley has now returned to his farm here.

Mrs. A. G. Smith spent a few days last week on a visit to friends in the city.

Gripping Drama in "Submarine D-1"

Though not a war picture, "Submarine D-1" appeals to the patriotic emotions, and the manner in which it pays tribute to the personnel and organization of the submarine service may be expected to have audiences A. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. standing up cheering.

It is a rough and robust he-man story that never is ribald through T. Schick, Mr. and Mrs. P. Dixon.

McLeod's funeral parlors were in charge of arrangements and the following old friends of the family acted as pall-bearers: Messrs. W. Mackay, Harry Mabey, Simon Kelly, Hans Kelly, John Ruete and John S. Ruete. Interment was in the family plot in Wainwright cemetery.

Fishing Season Open In Alberta May 16

Alberta's sport fishing season will open on May 16, according to information which officials of the Alberta Motor Association have received from the provincial fish and game branch. This opening date applies to the Red Deer river and its tributaries and to Minnewanka lake, in Banff national park.

The fishing season on the Bow and Athabasca rivers and their tributaries will open on June 1 and close on Oct. 15. At Kananaskis and Spray lakes, the season will open on June 16. In 1938 the season at these lakes opened on June 1.

This year Dolly Varden trout are off the protected list, according to game officials.

Various regulations are continued in force this year. One of these requires license buttons to be worn and plainly displayed. Children under 16 are not required to take out an angling permit.

Owing to the numerous spots in this province where good fishing is assured, officials of the A.M.A. expect that many motor tourists will take advantage of the season being open.

Best fishing spots in the province include Kananaskis and Spray lakes, west of Calgary, Raven river, west of Red Deer, and Highwood river, west of High River.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Margaret McKay, who passed away May 6th, 1938. God saw the rugged path was getting hard to climb. And gently whispered, "Peace divine" Fondly remembered by her sister and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Garth Mills have now returned from their trip to the city.

$1,000 For Farmers Essay Competition

The Searle Grain Company, Ltd., announces that the chairman of their Board of Directors, Mr. A. L. Searle, has contributed $1,000 for a prize farmers' essay competition. The first prize is $250.00; the second prize $150.00; and the third $100.00, with the balance of $500.00 to be divided between the remaining essays that are considered worthy of a prize. Any farmer over 21 years of age, farming in an part of Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, is eligible. The prize will be awarded for the best essays describing methods or practices concerning the production or management of crops or land or farm machinery, and which methods the contestants are actually using and which they have found to be useful and profitable. (The competition does not refer to livestock production or management.) Preference will be given to practices and methods that are not at present in general use, but which could be used by a large number of farmers. Essays should be forwarded to the Searle Grain Company, Ltd., not later than June 15th. The judging will be done by the Universities of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, for their respective provinces, and the Dominion Experimental Farms at Ottawa will be the final judges for placing the higher prizes.

Arrangements will be made to publish those essays containing information that may be of value to all farmers.

Monthly Meeting School Division, 32

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Wainwright School Division No. 32 was held on April 27th, with Trustees Spencer, Reimers, Baker, Sanders and Nicholson present. Mr. L. Godd, Superintendent of the Division, was also present.

The Divisional Board decided that in view of the fact that only four schools in their territory had signified their intention of attending the celebration in Edmonton of the visit of Their Majesties the King and Queen, that the board will not handle the sale of tickets for seats in the stands.

Mr. Meade was present at the meeting to discuss the proposed salary schedule for teachers.

The Divisional Board approved of circular being sent to all teachers and local district boards in the Division, containing information as to the royal train at Wainwright, as follows:

In connection with arrangements at this point it has been ascertained that the royal train will arrive at Wainwright at 8:55 on the morning of June 3rd and will stop here for a period of ten minutes. This point is not scheduled as a "state stop" and therefore no positive assurance can be given that Their Majesties will make an appearance. However, arrangements are being made to accommodate persons from this section of the province in order that such persons may have an opportunity of seeing Their Majesties if an appearance is made, and viewing of the royal train.

These arrangements include a full day's program of entertainment designed as suitable to both children and adults. Further details will be forwarded as soon as these are known. The next regular meeting is to be held on May 25th.

Red Cross Summary Past Achievement

Following is a brief summary of the work accomplished by the Alberta Division of the Red Cross.

Junior Red Cross Crippled Children's Hospital

Since its opening in 1922 it has treated 2,657 crippled children. In 1938 eighty-six patients were admitted for treatment and fifty additional received out-patient treatment. Hospital days for the year totaled 8,940.

Patients admitted were residents of 49 cities, towns and villages of Alberta, represented 13 nationalities and were treated in 15 different disabilities.

A registered teacher in the hospital gives regular school instruction and occupational training to the patients. In the past year 12 post-polyomyelitis cases have been given treatment at the hospital.

Junior Red Cross in Schools

In the schools of Alberta there were 854 Junior Red Cross branches with a membership of 22,717.

The purpose of these branches is to instill in the minds of the children the ideals of taking care of their own health, being of service to others and promoting goodwill and understanding.

Emergency Relief

A total of 1,368 families of the province, representing 6,940 persons all needy and deserving, were assisted with clothing, bedding and household necessities during the year.

Education and Health Services

A total of 648 Red Cross and other pamphlets were mailed to those requesting information on health matters, while 4,482 articles of infant clothing were distributed.

The 1939 Appeal

For its work during 1938 the Red Cross is asking Calgary citizens to contribute $7,500. The campaign for funds begins May 1 and closes May 6.

RAILWAY CONSTABLE IS BADLY INJURED PATROLLING YARDS

When his feet slipped on the rails, Ewart A. Grant, Toronto railway constable, fell in the path of an oncoming freight engine. Before he could throw himself clear, the engine struck his leg, badly injuring it. Unfortunately neither train crew nor any of the men in the yards saw the accident because the night was very dark. No one heard his cries and the injured man was in a serious plight. "Alone and helpless I might have bled to death," said Mr. Grant, "but fortunately I remembered my flash-light."

Although he was very weak, the railway constable waved it slowly back and forth. The beam of light finally caught the attention of some workmen who came to the rescue just as the injured man fainted. Mr. Grant was rushed to the operating room at the nearest hospital, where prompt medical attention saved his life.

Nancy Hart's HOME NEWS

When a nail starts to split or peel, don't follow the old custom of heaving the edge to work away the broken part. Revolving only the nail tip weakens it. Of course if the nail is actually broken it must be filed back beyond the broken spot. But if a layer has begun to split or peel off, instead of shortening the nail, simply file the edge close. Then apply polish clear over the nail tip. Or, if you want the nail to show, apply a second coat of colorless polish over your deep polish, and cover the tip with the second coat only. The polish reinforces the weakened part and protects the nail, besides forming a smooth, even surface that won't catch when you pull on gloves or stockings.

Scrawny throats and the neglected area back of the neck, upper arms, elbows and knees are best treated with a body brush in the bath. Soft bristles are much more invigorating than cloths or sponges. Continued massage with plenty of warm sudsy water will soon coax these neglected areas into a state of satin smoothness and whiteness—evidence of a youthful skin. When there are blackheads and other unsightly skin conditions, it is especially important that the body brush be used regularly.

An exhibition of model apartment and home furnishings shows closet doors that slide back and forth on a groove, flat with the surrounding wall. They have many advantages over the ordinary closet doors that open out in the rooms and are all too often left gaping. Another clever idea are drawers in a man's chest, opening out at the end just the width of his shirt.

Household Hint: A whole clove nut is to be fried, will give them a delicious, spicy flavor.

The Ritual of Earth

On a bright, sunny day in the latter part of April, 1938, the daily newspapers of America received an insertion order for a full page advertisement without enthusiasm. On the same day their front pages were plastered in black face type with the findings of a scientific convulsion which had just ended. The advertisement contained the gist of a conclusion which the world had prayed for weeks would be otherwise, and in effect, read:

"Your assembly of leaders of scientific, religious, business and political thought, hereby announces its failure to find a solution of the world's great problem, and therefore proclaims May 1st, 1939, as a Universal Day of Sorrows, in token of our humility and futility before a power greater than ourselves."

A visitor from another world coming to this earth one hundred years from now might well be excused his perplexity at a turn of events which had cast the earth into such deep foreboding, except that the earth people were just as puzzled and stunned as he by the final realization that their vaunted civilization and human habitation of the globe was drawing to a close. The stranger asked a motionless, tear-stained figure the meaning, and was given this reply:

"Well, it all goes back to the second World War between us and them. That was over 60 years ago. There was much talk about the curious phenomenon after the peace was signed, but we don't talk about it now. They said at first that we were to blame, and we said it was them, but we know different now, it was neither one of us, but something beyond all."

"The ruined towns and cities of Europe, the useless factories and railways, the heaping mounds of dead and abandoned fields are just the same today as we left them then—but we didn't know it until it was too late."

"I remember the first hint I got. It was when I returned home on leave after five years of bloody, futile carnage, when I got that first inkling. It came out in a story the wife was reading to me about a scientist who that day had said: 'The birth rate is dropping in this war—they better make peace.' Yes, we should have made peace before it was too late, but we never realized then, neither we nor they.

"We all thought the scientist was crazy then as we read his ravings: 'The stars may be tired of us. They better make peace. I have never witnessed such a queer maternity curve. Suppose there are no more babies. There is a certain pattern in nature, and they are upsetting it with this continual disruption of earth. Ask your women what they think of it!'"

"Well, we didn't pay any more attention to the crackpot, and I returned to the trenches and we continued our shooting of each other. Then came official news of the fall of the birth rate, and the women knew. They smashed every government in two days, and we stopped fighting. We looked at each other across the shambles and I remember the kind of quiet bewildered madness each of us felt in the air. I remember coming home and the hysterical wrath of her as she stormed: 'Burn those clothes, take them off, I never want to see them again.' They were all like that. We were never officially demobilized. We simply stopped fighting and it was all over, although they did proclaim some sort of a treaty."

"And now we are going to have this Day of Sorrows. The earth hates humans, and we are going to return to the earth to ask forgiveness for something we know will not be forgiven."

"At first we hated the animals—we wondered what they would do when they became more numerous than humans—but we don't care any more. You can call it a virus, as the scientists do, some sterile thing that entered the human bloodstream years ago, from too much shell shock and poison fumes that disrupted the chain of chromosomes. I don't. It is something else. Something greater than that. Some one has tired of us. 'You see there aren't any children now. Babies are not born any more. That is why they are starting this Day of Sorrows. But it is too late now. And the ritual of the earth will no more be seen.'"

SLIMMERIZING TROCK

Pattern No. 8797: Want to go places in true Comopolitan style and comfort? Here's one mighty good and simple way. Make this all-occasion dress in one of the heavy sheers or perhaps striped silk or grey print. Its capelet pictures freedom and gracefulness especially right for those who have outgrown smaller size ranges. The waist line has a raised front in an inverted V and this detail, too, improves one's centre point. The skirt panels are designed to flatter the hips while the flare in generous proportions gives charm to the silhouette. Naught but a little flower touch adorns the neckline—just enough to uphold the feminine motif.

The World of Wheat

H. G. L. Strange,
Director, Research Department,
Sears Grain Company, Ltd.

A member of the Government recently announced that the Dominion Treasury had expended, on assistance for the West during the past eight years, the sum of 118 million dollars. Some of our good friends in the East have suggested that this is a very handsome contribution and that Western farmers, therefore, should be more modest in their demands for further assistance.

We all agree that 118 million dollars is a lot of money; but there is something else to be remembered, too, which is that even during these distressful eight years, the West contributed a much larger sum of money than 118 million to Eastern Canada.

Professor Viner, a recognized world authority, stated to the Rowell Commission recently that he calculated the Prairie Provinces contributed in normal years approximately 47 million dollars each year to the East, in the form of the higher costs farmers had to pay for the things they bought; these higher costs being the result of the high tariff protection enjoyed by Eastern manufacturing industries.

Far, then, from the West having been an expense to the East, actually even during those last eight years of great distress and need, prairie farmers still paid to the East, as a bonus, considerably more than they received from the Dominion.

Following factors have tended to raise prices: European situation again ominous with Italian occupation of Albania—Greece buys Argentine wheat—Some complaints of unfavorable weather in south and west Australia—Roumania reduces wheat export subsidy—Drought compels South African farmers to feed corn to cattle—Canada makes wheat shipment to China.

Following factors have tended to lower prices: Beneficial rains in U.S. winter and spring wheat area—Indian wheat harvest well advanced—Brazilian millers ordered to incorporate 10% native wheat in their mix—Danubian winter crop prospects continue favorable—Some war risk marine insurance withdrawn—Prospects good for fruit crop in Oklahoma.

DRUG HABITS

The "vicious" habit-forming drugs are opium and its compounds, cocaine and cannabis indica. Next in order of offensiveness are hyoscyamus, chloral, ether and chloroform. Alcohol has its definite dangers and there is a large array of mischievous drugs such as veronal, acetanilid and other coal-tar preparations and finally tobacco, coffee and tea. Opium and morphine are the most dangerous of all. The major interest of the opium (morphine) user is to get a supply. A doctor, addicted to the use of morphine, said: "Truth is an unknown quantity among morphine addicts. It makes liars of us all."

Opium is the dried juice of the poppy. Its effect is due to the morphine it contains. Opium is taken by addicts in three ways: (1) by smoking opium by which some of the morphine is carried over in the smoke and absorbed from the respiratory tract. Smoking opium is confined chiefly to China and eastern countries. (2) In the form of pills or laudanum taken by mouth. (3) by hypodermic injection of morphine. The opium addict loses all idea of honor and truthfulness. He is nervous, weak in character and utterly unfit for work. Cure is rare, relief is common and relapses frequent.

Cocaine is made from the leaves of the coca plant. It is "the divine plant of the Incas of Peru." The Indians of the Andes wet a handful of the ground wet leaves with saliva, mix in a small amount of lime, and hold the mass inside the cheek. The Indians have used this since time immemorial; it does away with the desire for food or sleep and allows of prodigious physical exertion without fatigue.

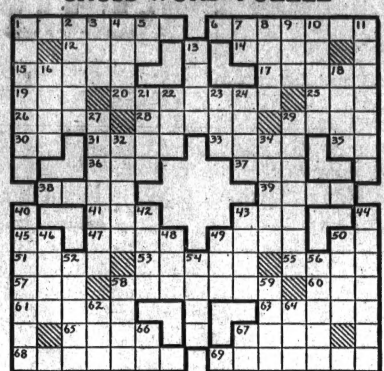

The cocaine addict loses self-control. It is useless to crimes of violence. Addicts are said to take cocaine or alcohol or both to brace their nerves.

Cannabis indica, made from Indian hemp or marihuana, has an effect similar to cocaine. It is smoked or used as an intoxicating drink. Its use sometimes leads to mania and insanity.

Various sleeping medicines, headache remedies and relievers of pain are dangerous if their use is persisted in too long or to too great an extent. Their most conspicuous effect is mental dullness.

Rosenau says that there are at least 110,000 addicts of opium and cocaine in the United States. The proportion is probably somewhat smaller in Canada, but even in this country the proportion is too high.

BUNT RESISTANT VARIETIES OF WHEAT

Next to black stem rust, bunt, or stinking smut, is considered by many to be the most serious disease of wheat in North America, states W. F. Hanna, Dominion Rust Research Laboratory. Losses from bunt vary greatly in different wheat growing regions, depending mainly upon cropping methods, local climatic conditions and the degree of susceptibility of the particular varieties of wheat under cultivation. In certain districts of the Pacific Northwest, from one-fourth to two-thirds of the crop arriving at the terminal markets have graded smutty. Losses in Western Canada have never approached this figure, but even there, in certain years almost 2 per cent. of the wheat has graded smutty. In 1929, for example, losses from bunt through reduction in grades alone, without considering reduction in yield, were in excess of $400,000.

A glance at the grain inspection records will show that losses are not evenly distributed among different classes of wheat. Thus, in 1930, 17 per cent. of the durum wheat and, in 1935, 34 per cent. of the Alberta Red Winter wheat graded smutty, although the incidence of smut in the hard red spring wheats has rarely exceeded 1 per cent. In explanation of this uneven distribution of bunt losses it might seem at first sight that the hard red spring wheats are more resistant to bunt than the durum and winter wheats. Experiments have shown, however, that bunt resistance is not confined to any particular class of wheats but is rather characteristic of certain varieties. There are resistant and susceptible varieties of durum and winter wheat just as there are resistant and susceptible varieties of hard red spring wheat, and the reason for the heavy bunt losses in the durum and winter wheats is that susceptible rather than resistant varieties have been widely grown. On the other hand Marquis, which until recently has comprised the bulk of the hard red spring wheat crop, has been moderately bunt resistant.

With recent improvements in methods of seed treatment, it might seem that bunt resistance is of minor importance. It is true that careful and regular seed treatment will protect even the most susceptible variety from bunt infection, but, unfortunately, much of the seed is still sown without treatment, and past experience has shown that susceptible varieties such as Koka, Cerus, Russell and Min-dum soon become contaminated with bunt unless they are regularly treated. Under the same conditions, however, a moderately resistant variety such as Marquis has remained reasonably free from bunt. The new rust resistant varieties, Remown and Regent, are considerably more resistant to bunt than Marquis, and as they become more widely grown bunt losses should tend to decrease. But bunt resistance is by no means always associated with rust resistance; in fact, a rust resistant wheat may be highly susceptible to bunt. This is well illustrated by the variety Thatcher, which is resistant to stem rust and loose smut but quite susceptible to bunt.

The aim of the scientist is to produce wheats that are resistant to all of the important diseases. This task may require years of patient and skillful experimentation but its accomplishment is already within sight. If the present rate of progress can be maintained Canadian farmers will be fore long able to grow varieties of wheat that are resistant or immune to the common diseases such as stem rust, leaf rust, loose smut and bunt.

IMPROVED PASTURES

HIGHER FOOD VALUE

"Evergreen Pastures" is the title of one of the brilliant array of 1939 seed catalogues. The contribution of a Scottish seed house, the contents are not directly applicable to Canadian conditions, yet the splendid pasture scenes and general descriptive information leave no doubt in the reader's mind that remarkable advances are being made toward providing the farmer with seed of superior pasture strains of grasses and legumes.

Climatic conditions in many parts of this country may not permit of pasture improvement in the same remarkable degree as on some Scottish farms, yet the work of Canadian research experts and the experience of hundreds of practical farmers prove that much of Canadian pasture land can be made vastly more productive than it is, says G. R. Snyder, soils chemist. Not only do improved pastures yield more grass per acre, but the herbage is notably richer in protein, minerals, vitamins and carotene, a fact definitely proven by the researches of Professor N. J. Thomas, Ontario Agricultural College, and other authorities.

When one realizes that the herbage from fertilized pastures may contain as much protein as high as 25 per cent. of protein, it is easy to understand why improved pastures head the list of farm crops in actual value of food produced per acre.

The first requisite in pasture improvement is the building up of soil fertility. Liming may be necessary for very acid soils but in general the major mineral plant foods—phosphate and potash—are of first importance. If the process is one of renovating an old pasture without liming, it is up, the first application of fertilizer must be heavy enough—400 to 600 pounds of 0-16-6 or 2-16-6 per acre—to produce a vigorous growth of wild white clover and other pasture legumes. Wild white clover, a true perennial with creeping stems that root at the nodes, provides exceptionally nutritious and palatable herbage. It adds nitrogen to the soil and produces a dense sward that is very effective in moisture control through preventing run-off from heavy summer rains and evaporation during periods of extreme heat. When establishing new pastures it is advisable to consult a forage crop expert regarding the most suitable pasture mixtures for the particular soil and regional conditions. In the selection of fields or areas for improvement, one should consider especially in the case of dairy farms, their distance from the farm buildings. The best pasture land should receive first attention and the area restricted to an acreage that can be properly grazed with the stock available. As a rule, one and a half acres of improved pasture is sufficient for one cow or its equivalent during a grazing season of from five to six months.

Short leafy herbage is the most palatable and nutritious. Grazing management is very important. If the livestock cannot prevent the development of stumpy material, the mowing machine should be used.

Beauty for YOU

The Secrets of Good Looks by Barbara Lynn

HAVE YOU AN OILY SKIN? Women with an oily skin need to give it constant care, for while it is true that wrinkles do not form so easily as on a dry skin, there are other disadvantages that can be just as tiresome. The basic rule for an oily skin is—keep it immaculately clean. Whatever else you do, wash often; and because you need a soap with good cleansing qualities, I advise palmolive soap. Use a cleansing cream that is especially prepared for an oily skin, and after cleansing your face thoroughly wipe it with a pad of cotton-wool soaked in astringent lotion. Never, never leave cream on your face overnight.

Avoid rich foods, eat lots of fruit and vegetables and drink water as often as you can. Remember that blackheads are fond of an oily skin! If you are meticulous about cleansing, you won't have to worry so much about blemishes.

As a special treat for an oily skin, Beat up the plain white of an egg in a basin, then spread it over the face. Let it dry thoroughly and remain on for about 15 minutes before removing with cold water.

I will gladly advise you, confidentially, on your personal beauty problems. And detailed leaflets on the following subjects are available for a 3c stamp each: Face; Eyes; Hair; Hands; Feet; Bust; Superbust Hair; Underweight; Reducing in Spots; Slimming.

SAFER SPRING MOTORING!

All over Canada this month, highway constables and city police officers are waging war against motorists who do not keep their cars in safe mechanical condition. The most common carelessness displayed by motorists is with regard to their headlights and tail lights. The driver who travels on highways with one headlight out is considered one of the greatest menaces in spring motoring. Police everywhere are issuing reports that such carelessness must be stopped—in the interests of greater safety. Don't be a one-eyed driver. Wine motorists who wish to avoid fines should have their brakes tested and headlights checked today.

Forbearance It is a noble and great thing to cover the blemishes, and to excuse the failings of a friend; to draw a curtain before his stains and to display his perfections; to bury his weaknesses in silence, but to proclaim his virtues from the house-top.—South.

Borrowing Go to friends for advice; to women for pity; to strangers for charity; to relatives for nothing.—Spanish Proverb.

INSECTS NOT REPELLED

BY OBODUS FORMULAE

A lotion which repels mosquitoes, black flies and other insects and yet which actually has a pleasant odor is the latest result of collaboration between University scientists and an industrial company. The work on the part of the research specialists wasn't any too pleasant. They spent many hours in mosquito-infested swamps, trying many varieties of existing insect-repellents and many new formulas. They finally discovered that, in every case, it wasn't the smell which kept mosquitoes and black flies from biting. They at length created a new formula, and when they used it on their arms and faces, it caused insects to stay away on every occasion. To this new formula, a pleasant perfume was added. Further tests proved the new lotion to be absolutely harmless for even the tender skin of babies. So it seems that this summer Canadians can successfully fight off all biting insects without having to use a lotion with a strong, unpleasant odor, and without fear of harming the tenderest skin.

CLEAN UP!

A clean-looking town always draws favorable comment from visitors, and also affords considerable satisfaction to the citizens thereof. To get the best result it takes a certain amount of co-operation between the town executives and the citizens; and without doubt Wainwright has numerous spots which would profit by the use of a thorough "Clean-up and Paint-up" campaign. Getting rid of ash heaps and rubbish piles should be soon under way, and with all helping as they can by gathering this eyecore into the lanes and the town authorities arranging to have the cans and litter carried away to the nuisance ground. Incentive would be given to all to commence beautifying the grounds and painting properties.

Let us show our civic pride by each doing their bit to this end, and the town doing its share with what revenue may be available for the purpose, and we can soon all be neat and clean around our whole town and the place prove an inviting spot for all and sundry; as well as all having the satisfaction of a reduction in the hazards of fever and a stoppage in a great measure of the annual fly nuisance.

A BOWER WENT FORTH TO SOW!

Each Springtime the farmer goes into his field and sows his crops in the hope that, three months afterwards, he will reap a harvest the sale of which will maintain his household and his farm plan for another year, says the Brooks Bulletin.

There is something sublime in this seasonal hope. Without this moving force the farmer would never have the incentive to do his planting. He knows the growing crops will face all sorts of hazards and may even be totally destroyed. But if he doesn't sow he will never reap, so the work must go on in the face of possible discouragements.

The very faith which impels the farmer to entrust his seed to the fertile bosom of Mother Earth is based on the knowledge that year after year, generation after generation, century after century, there have been harvests as the result of plantings. The mysterious alchemy which combines the resources of the soil with the essences of seed and sunlight never fail to perform the annual miracle of reproduction. The vicissitudes of Nature may in some degree spoil the returns, but the infinite power for plants to bloom and bear fruit never fails.

It is the seeming innaminate seed which helps mankind to live and keep on living; and it is the great deed of the past which must help us to keep life going on—the grace of Mozart and Ronsard; the smile of Horace and Montaigne; the courage of Homer and Hardy.

So we face another seed-time, conscious of the alliance of little understood and vastly mysterious powers which, like the Arabic genii, will respond to our efforts when we collaborate with the great forces of Nature.

When Keith returns from his travel tour, Alta Magoon, C.J.C.A. accountant, will sail on the Ascania for London, and will make a somewhat similar tour, travelling by automobile. Miss Magoon's interviews with broadcasting officials will be in England, Scotland and Ireland. From her notes she will prepare a series of musical travel talks similar to Keith's but providing the woman's outlook.

Looks as though the C.J.C.A. theme song this summer will be, "Sailing, Sailing, Over the Ocean Blue!" The axiom concerning the short memory and ingratitude of men is taking a terrific beating. It is being disproved daily by scores of men and women who were assisted by John J. Anthony, director of the Original Good Will Hour, heard over station C.J.C.A., Tuesdays, 7:00 to 7:30 p.m.

Although Mr. Anthony has neither personal means nor sponsorship to aid people in dire economic straits, many such individuals who have benefited by his counsel on the program have also been helped materially by sympathetic radio listeners.

In the last month, more than forty persons who had been helped with money, clothing or rent-free dwellings have justified Mr. Anthony's faith in the fundamental goodness of human beings, by remembering their own hours of need. They, who once needed aid, have contributed generously.

Perhaps the most touching incident in this application of the Golden Rule came from a middle-aged woman who enclosed the following note with two dollar bills:

"I'm remembering what you listeners did for me when I was in a bad way. Now—thank the Lord—I'm able to take care of myself. God bless you and your radio listeners!"

The money was ear-marked for a young woman who was "not within the jurisdiction" of the various relief agencies, despite the fact that she was without funds and soon to be dispossessed from her furnished room.

The donor was a scrubwoman who earns $16 a week.

H. V. Kallenborn, whose comments on current affairs have made him a figure of world prominence, will join the "Information Please" experts on the broadcast of Monday, May 8, 9:30 to 10:00 p.m. from C.J.C.A. With him will be those authorities on matters of current vegetable, mineral and musical—Oscar Levant, John Kieran and Franklin P. Adams.

Presenting H. V. Kallenborn with problems needful of analysis, comment and solution will be Clifton P. Fadiman. It is hoped that Mr. Kallenborn will be able to deal at least adequately with the Fadiman question or questions, in spite of the unpredictable demands the regularly made by the spokesman of the Information Please Party.

Kallenborn brings a colorful background as reporter, editor, lecturer and world traveler, as well as radio news interpreter, to "Information Please."

Silver Theatre Line-Up!
Helen Hayes will pay return visits to the "Silver Theatre" program on Sundays, 3:00 p.m., May 21 and 28.

The return visits of this great actress for a double bill will be hailed with delight. To Canadian radio fans, her appearance will have a very special significance. Because when she is heard on the Canadian network over C.J.C.A., King George VI and Queen Elizabeth will be heard and it was Helen Hayes who made Queen Victoria—illustrious great-grandparent of His Majesty—live again for us in a memorable stage performance.

Alberta Editor Publishes Song!
H. G. Thumell, Editor of the Viking News and the Irma Times, has recently published a song entitled "Alberta, Canada, Is Calling Me". The Home Town Boys, artists on the Weekly Newspaper Program, are having a special arrangement of the melody made, and they will present it at an early date. Clip the lyric and listen for the melody on the Home Town program from C.J.C.A.:

You have heard about "My Old Kentucky Home",
And the cabin near the river Rio Grande,
The dreamy winding silvery Colorado,
And the girl I left behind in Dixie Land;

The coons a-moanin' sweet in Alabama,
The robins warbling away in Tennessee,
But the place that I love best, it is in the golden West,
Alberta, Canada, is calling me.

Chorus:
Where the rivers wind in the valleys,
And there's never a cloud in the sky,
The sunset lingers till dawnin'—
I want to be there by and by;
I know my sweetheart is waiting,
Oh, why did I ever roam,
The voice of the Northland is calling,
Alberta is calling me home.

To see the wheatfields waving in the sun,
To feel the breeze from mountains far away,

The gophers playing tag along the roadside,
Hear the roosters crowing at the break of day,
The wild ducks nesting 'neath the wild rose bushes,
The coyote calling to his lonesome mate,
Oh, the place I want to see, and the place I want to be,
Alberta, Canada, I long for thee.

SPECIAL CARS BUILT FOR KING AND QUEEN

Word from Ottawa says that two beautiful maroon automobiles, surpassing in size, beauty and magnificence anything previously built in the Canadian automotive industry, are now being completed at Ottawa for the use of the King and Queen during their Canadian tour in May and June. Selected for the honor of providing two of the four official cars which will be used by the royal party, General Motors of Canada assigned its most skilled designers and craftsmen to the task of creating vehicles suitable for the momentous occasion—the first visit of the King and Queen to Canadian soil.

Already familiar with the motoring tastes and preferences of the royal family through having built six cars for its members in the past three years, General Motors of Canada incorporated into the two machines the ultimate in luxury and safety for the royal passengers, combined with a high degree of visibility enabling the occupants to be readily seen by the loyal citizens of Canada before whom they will pass.

To everyone connected with the work, the task of producing the royal cars is a source of pride. From R. S. McLaughlin, President of General Motors of Canada, down to the humblest of the craftsmen engaged in assembling the cars by painstaking hand labor, the job is prized and regarded as an opportunity of expressing the deep devotion which they and all their fellow Canadians feel for their King and Queen.

A factor in the according of this double honour to General Motors of Canada by the government was the fact that General Motors of Canada was able to offer an undertaking that 75% of the car's content in labor and materials would be Canadian as compared to the 55% which was stipulated by the government in considering plans for the vehicles.

The impressiveness and roominess of the vehicles is best visualized by considering the tremendous wheelbase of 158 inches. This is longer than the biggest stock car ever built in Canada, and means that the total over-all length will be more than 20 feet from bumper to bumper. Details and specifications of the two Ottawa-built vehicles are identical with the exception of upholstery color.

A McLaughlin-Bulck "Limited" motor provides the power. Radical changes in chassis dimensions, weight distribution and body style result in two finished vehicles which defy comparison in any respect with the most luxurious automobiles ever built.

The beautiful hand-made bodies—finished in a special shade of Royal Maroon which had to be perfectly matched in color with the royal cars regularly used in Britain—are of the convertible sedan type, with the glass sides extended much further toward the rear, so as to afford an unobstructed view of the occupants. The collapsible tops are of beige superfine duck. The upholstery—maroon in one car and beige in the other—is broadcloth in the rear compartment and leather in the front, with matching laprobes and carpets. When the tops are lowered, the occupants will be exposed to an unobstructed view from all sides, protected only by the circle of shatterproof glass which can be lowered into the body slots. Ample head-room in the rear compartment is provided for the plumed head-dress which His Majesty frequently wears on formal occasions. Reversed auxiliary seats facing the rear seat occupants are provided for

DESIGNED AS THE HOME OF A FUSSY FAMILY

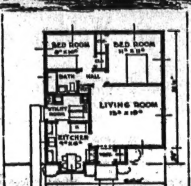

There once was a man who said, "You'll not catch me ev'ning a home. I have headaches enough." So he rented a house on the edge of town. It was not a new house, but it had all the necessary rooms. But after a few weeks, his wife complained that since there was really no closet space to speak of, she thought they'd better buy one or two large wardrobes.

So they did. They bought two large "wardrobes" that required the most-furnished-wall space in the bedrooms. The house, of course, didn't have a bathroom, so every morning and every night, the man would go down into the depths of the cellar, save a good many iron parts, and bath headily and elegantly in the bathing place.

Then, when the wind blew, the shadows would settle like pass in a Bay and puff drafts would sweep across the floor. Of course, the house wasn't finished.

Canadian motor shows finished

The man, doors wouldn't shut tightly, the grass wouldn't grow—not enough topsoil—the hot water tap in the bathroom only dribbled. But, the rent was cheap, and being houses, they gradually accustomed themselves to the house. But at the end of a few years, the house needed painting. He spoke to the landlord about it—he had done so frequently—but the landlord only shrugged his shoulders.

"I'm not making enough on your rent to paint it this season."

Well, the man got so mad that he went home and went into conference with his wife. And three months later to the day they moved into this house.

It is a good house. It was designed by Randolph Evans—who is a small house specialist—for the Monthly Small House Club at 237 East 46th Street in New York. Because this house is designed to last, to be living-proof, it is built with long-lived materials. To prevent drafts and cold walls in winter and unbearably hot bedrooms in summer, both the walls and top floor ceiling are insulated with fireproof mineral wool. Non-rusting water pipes always run full and steady, ample closets provide plenty of storage space, and brightly colored asphalt shingles fire-protect the roof. Designed to build for less than $15,000, it sits on a 40 foot lot and still leaves room for a drive way, should a garage be added.

use of supporting dignitaries or other members of the royal entourage. Exposed hardware is finished in gleaming chrome.

Among the provisions for the safety of the passengers is the use of "safety tubes" in the six-ply white-wall tires with which the cars are equipped.

Apart from their almost startling size, beauty of design and distinctiveness of color, the two McLaughlin-Bulck carry traditional and unmistakable symbols of the regal rank of their occupants. On each rear door there is a hand-painted royal crest. A striking blue signal light supplements the specially designed driving lamps. Above the centre post of the windshield the royal standard is imposed as evidence that the greatest Dominion of the British Empire is playing host to her king.

CHAPTER XXXV

Why, Elizabeth wondered, had Professor Mores released Michael? Was it to try to give Professor Auer the impression that nothing was amiss? There was a tense silence as they all took their places, Mary seating herself next to Michael. Ahmed brought on the soup, but no one touched it—except Mores.

Stephen was the first to speak. "No one seems to be hungry," he said quietly. "Or are we all afraid to eat?"

He lit a cigarette and glanced around. There was no answer for a moment.

Then, Mary suddenly spoke. "The last time I had anything to eat," she cried shrilly, "I was drugged!"

"Calm yourself, Miss Morris," Nurse Hilton said soothingly. "But I tell you..." Mary's voice rose hysterically.

"Mary," Michael said softly, reaching for her hand. "Just a moment, dear." He drew a long breath, and looked around. "In preference to eating," he said slowly, "perhaps you would all like to listen to a story that I want to tell Professor Auer?"

Again, there was silence. Elizabeth, breathing a little faster, glanced at Professor Mores. His eyes were cold and inscrutable as he stared at Michael.

"The boy is unbalanced," he muttered. "I don't agree," Auer said sharply. "Go ahead, Michael. Let's hear what you have to say."

Michael put his elbows on the table and leaned forward.

"My father," he began slowly, "made a sensational scientific discovery a few months before his death. It represented the work of a lifetime and would have added considerably even to his great fame, besides bringing him a large fortune."

He hesitated, apparently finding it difficult to express himself.

"And then," Stephen put in, "Dr. Brown confided his discovery to some one, and that person became greedy and jealous."

"How could you know?" Michael asked in surprise.

"A logical guess."

"Yes," Michael continued. "He not only shared his secret with a man supposed to be his friend, but also told that friend the terms of a new will he had made as a result of his discovery. However, I did not know this—I have only reached that conclusion from what has happened in recent months. Even at the time of my father's death, when his will was opened, I did not recognize its significance. But now I am convinced—and have been for some time—that the accident in which he and my sister died was not an accident—it was planned. It was a deliberate attempt to murder my father, my sister and myself!"

Michael paused and lit a cigarette, his hands trembling slightly.

"It wasn't until I came here to convalesce from typhoid, at the suggestion of that same friend of my father's, that I became aware of his evil designs. I had played right into his hands by agreeing to come here. I was just beginning to recover when I was made a prisoner—on the pretext that I was mentally unbalanced. I was dogged and submitted to agonizing torture—both mental and physical—in an effort to throw me off balance. Luckily, I have a strong constitution or I could never have stood the strain. Several times I did come near the breaking point.

"At first, I tried to put up a fight, but then I decided that the best thing was to play my enemy's game and pretend to go to pieces nervously. I wanted to see what his next move would be. Michael turned and looked at Elizabeth. "You know what that next move was—an attempt to bring my sister back to life in your person."

"At the time of my sister's death, there was a rumor at first that it was her maid, not she, who had been killed. I suppose it was his intention to manufacture proof that the rumor was correct, and then, after doping you to the point where you wouldn't know your own identity, to bring you forward as my sister."

"But why?" Elizabeth exclaimed. "What would he gain by driving you insane and bringing your sister back to life?"

"The explanation lies in my father's will. But," Michael added grimly, now looking straight at Mores, "you have gone too far, you devil! You can't get away with it! Not with all these witnesses against you. The game is up!"

Mores, who had been listening coolly through all this, now spoke at last.

"Is it?" he asked calmly. "Oh, no. You're mistaken!"

He made a quick movement with his hand, and suddenly produced a revolver. At the same instant, Ahmed also armed with a revolver, appeared from the pantry.

Mores rose and backed away from the table. He was smiling—a devilish, horrible smile.

"Don't move, any of you! The last trick is mine!" He turned to Michael. "You fool, you have signed your own and Miss Allen's death warrant by your statement! I was prepared to let you live if you responded to treatment, but now that you have tempted me to be too clever—now I am forced to dispose of you. Too bad!"

Mores' eyes roved over the others in the room.

"As for the rest of you—you were already doomed. I have prepared my last accident—a regrettable accident in the laboratory—which will wipe out all witnesses against me." His hard glance fell on Nurse Hilton.

"Yes, you too, Miss Hilton. You thought you were fooling me, but you haven't fooled me for a moment. You were useful to me for a time, despite your treachery, but that usefulness has now come to an end." He paused. "I am sorry to see some of you go, but I can't help it. You are too dangerous to me. And now, my friends, kindly go through that door, single file."

"Well," Stephen murmured, "I hate to die, but I suppose there is nothing to be done about it."

Then, suddenly, he and Michael, as if on a signal, sprang to their feet. In the same instant, the heavy table was raised on end and sent crashing over. Two shots rang out. An instant later the room became a nightmarish confusion of desperate fighting men.

CHAPTER XXXVI

It was all over in a few minutes. Elizabeth, who had fallen to the floor when the table had been pushed over, now struggled to her feet.

She saw the Mores had been overwhelmed, and that Stephen and Professor Auer were engaged in tying his hands behind him. Michael, who had succeeded in wrenching Ahmed's gun from him, had knocked him down and was now standing guard over his prostrate form. Nurse Hilton, Mary and Miss Dudley were huddled in a corner of the room.

Stephen, having finished with Mores, came over to Elizabeth.

"I hope you weren't hurt, Beth," he said anxiously.

"No," she quickly assured him. "But—oh, Stephen, how brave you were!"

"Nonsense! It was our only chance!"

He refused to listen to any further words of praise and turned to give swift orders. He told Michael and Professor Auer to take Mores and Ahmed to the study, and went himself to send one of the kitchen boys to the village to phone for the Beirut police.

A little later, they all gathered in the study to wait. Mores, his face distorted with rage, was securely tied to a chair. Ahmed, similarly trussed, sat without expression.

Professor Auer lit a cigarette and sighed.

"Well, Mores, you weren't as smart as you thought you were."

"You had fool's luck," Mores muttered. "My plan was perfect."

Stephen frowned. "So? Well, we were, more or less, what you planned was—but we still don't know what your motives were."

He turned to Michael. "You mentioned your father's will as being the cause of all that has happened. Perhaps you wouldn't mind explaining."

"Not at all," said Michael. "My father's last will, made after the valuable discovery of which I told you, left his entire estate, scientific and material, to his children—my sister and me. However, he evidently felt that Betty Ann, being a woman, needed the guidance of a man—some one older and more experienced than myself—and so, the will appointed his old friend, Professor Mores, as guardian of Betty Ann and administrator of her share of the estate."

"A further provision was that, if either child died or became mentally incapacitated, his or her share should—in the first case—pass directly to the other child; or—in the second case—pass to the control of the other child. You see, several generations ago, there was a case of insanity in our family, and I suppose that my father was simply trying to provide for every possible contingency."

Then came another provision—and this is important. In the remote event that both children died before Mores—and without issue—the whole estate should pass to him."

Michael paused here to glance at Mores, who sat sullenly, making no comment. Then he continued.

"After I came here to the sanatorium, and became aware that Mores had some sordid purpose in bringing me here, I placed things together and figured out that my father must have told Mores of his valuable discovery and also of the terms of his will. I then became convinced that Mores, tempted by the wealth that my father's discovery would bring him if he fell heir to it, had tried to kill us all off in an 'arranged' accident. I had always thought there was something queer about that accident, and now I was sure that it had been deliberately planned."

"But I couldn't, at first, figure out what Mores was up to now. I could not see how driving me insane and gaining him anything. If he had been my guardian, then my insanity would have given him control of what I had inherited from my father—but he was not. He had been appointed guardian only to Betty Ann. The only way in which he could gain anything from me was through my death."

"It wasn't until he brought Miss Allen here and started taking steps toward transforming her into my poor sister, that I suddenly saw light. Having failed to kill me off, yet, my father and sister, he had evidently been afraid to make a second attempt on my life, for fear of being caught the second time and so, he had devised a devilish scheme. If he could have me adjudged insane and, at the same time, bring Betty Ann back to life, the whole estate, in accordance with the terms of the will, would pass to her control, to be administered by her guardian. In short, he would be the person who would have actual control of it!"

"However, in trying to carry out this scheme, he got beyond his depth and, when he finally saw tonight that it was doomed to failure, he decided that he would have to revert to his original intention—which was simply to do away with me. And, of course, he would have to do away with the rest of you as well. But," Michael ended with a sigh, "fortunately we were too many for him."

For a moment after he finished, there was silence.

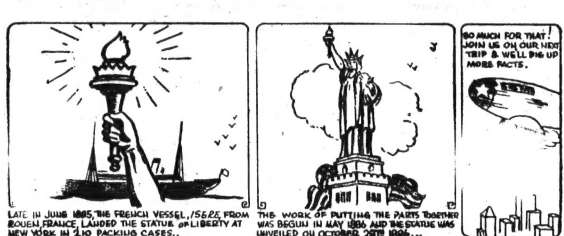

Then Mores laughed sarcastically. "I congratulate you on your astuteness, Mr. Brown. In only one particular is your story inaccurate. When I brought you here to the sanatorium, I was my intention to have you die. Dr. Morris would have certified your death as natural. But when I saw Miss Allen in New York, the amazing coincidence of her resemblance to your sister inspired my second plan. Such an opportunity as she offered me seemed too good to be wasted."

"How did you persuade Dr. Morris to be your accomplice?" Miss Dudley suddenly asked.

Mores sneered. "I knew of an unfortunate episode in Morris' past

House of Hazards

By Mac Arthur

which would have ruined him if made public. I simply blackmailed him."

"And you killed Mrs. Graham because she knew too much?" Stephen questioned grimly.

"Mrs. Graham died of heart failure," Mores said stubbornly.

Stephen shrugged. "Well, we'll leave that to the police."

He rose and came over to Elizabeth.

"While we're waiting, let's go for a stroll, darling. It's been a long time since we've had any fresh air."

Elizabeth agreed with alacrity.

Outside, the moon was casting a silvery gleam over the world. Stephen and Elizabeth, arm in arm, strolled down the road a short distance, then wandered off to the side and sat down.

Elizabeth drew a long breath. "What about Dr. Morris?" she asked. "What will happen to him?"

In spite of everything, I can't help feeling sorry for him."

Stephen hesitated, then said quietly. "You needn't worry about Dr. Morris. He's beyond the troubles of this world. He—he died this afternoon. I didn't tell you before because I didn't want to upset you."

Elizabeth was silent for a moment, then said slowly, "I'm sorry—but I suppose it was best that way." She shuddered slightly. "Thank heaven it's all over! It's—it's been horrible!"

Stephen reached for her hand. "Let's forget about it, darling," he said gently. "There's something far more important that I want to talk about now."

As he slipped his arm around her, she laid her head on his shoulder and tried to think that it had all been just a nightmare—that only this peaceful moment was real.

Hints for the Household

Conducted By Betty Barclay

Pineapple Curry Dressing

1½ tablespoons cornstarch
1 cup canned unsweetened Hawaiian pineapple juice
¼ teaspoon curry powder
1 teaspoon cold water
Cook cornstarch and pineapple juice until thick and creamy, then add curry which has been mixed with the cold water. Beat thoroughly. Cool on ice. It should be the consistency of brown sauce. If too thick, add a little pineapple juice. Vary quantity of curry according to taste, but never let the curry flavor predominate the pineapple.

When ready to serve, add whipped cream, whipped egg whites or mayonnaise, according to taste.

This sauce will keep for several days in the refrigerator and may be used in cocktails, fruit cups, salads or with cold entrées, meat, chicken, eggs or fish.

Frozen Orange Cream

1 package vanilla arrowroot pudding
1 cup milk
½ cup sugar
½ cup orange juice
Grated rind ½ orange
1 cup cream, whipped

Mix vanilla arrowroot pudding with milk; bring to boil, stirring constantly. Remove from fire; add sugar. Cool; add orange juice and rind. Pour into refrigerator freezing tray; freeze quickly for 1 hour. Mix in whipped cream; continue freezing for 3 to 4 hours.

Makes about 1 quart.

Maple Oatmeal Cookies

2½ cups fine oatmeal
1 cup maple syrup
¼ cup water
2½ cups flour
1 cup shortening
1 teaspoon soda

Boil water and syrup together, add soda, then shortening. Cool slightly. Add to dry ingredients and allow the mixture to cool thoroughly before rolling out.

Maple Syrup Pie

2 cups maple syrup
2 egg yolks
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons corn starch
A pinch of salt

Boil milk and syrup together. Add starch which has been blended with a little cold milk. Cook in double boiler, stirring constantly for five minutes. Pour over the beaten eggs and return to double boiler. Cook five minutes, pour into baked pastry shell. Cover top with meringue made from two egg whites.

Maple Custard

2 cups milk
1 cup maple syrup
3 eggs

Beat milk and syrup together. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well. Cook in double boiler, stirring constantly for five minutes. Pour into baked pastry shell. Cover top with meringue made from two egg whites.

Speed
Tender vegetables are quickly grown. A check by dry weather or anything else invariably causes woodiness. To eliminate such danger experienced market gardeners push their plants along with frequent applications of commercial fertilizer. This must be applied carefully so as to be close to but not actually touching stems or roots.

Perennials
Perennial flowers add a feeling of permanence to any garden. Coming on year after year they maintain interest throughout the dormant months and because of their quick start they usually bloom ahead of annuals. While solid perennials beds are very popular another satisfactory plan is to have a few of these plants scattered about the garden for early bloom and fill in between with annuals.

Selection will depend upon what part of Canada the reader lives. Throughout most of the country, however, the following brief list will prove reasonably hardy: delphinium, peony, oriental poppy, phlox, English primrose, English daisy, and violas.

Reference Books
Seed catalogues put out by the large firms contain much more than a mere mention of the many flowers and vegetables available and recommended in Canada. They specify important points such as time of planting, resistance or lack of resistance to frost, height, color, season of blooming, whether scented and also the suitability of the flowers for cutting purposes. All these points should be taken into consideration in planning a real garden, authorities state, as only with such knowledge can a comprehensive and practical scheme be worked out.

Lawns
No garden is complete without a lawn and the richer, greener and softer that lawn is the better the whole picture.

The average person forgets that grass is an ordinary garden plant requiring food and care just as much as flowers or vegetables. Good selection is also just as important. Good lawns

Heat milk and maple syrup together to boiling point but do not allow to boil. Pour over the eggs which have been well beaten, add a few grains of salt, and strain into custard cups. Set cups in warm water and bake until custard is firm. Cool and turn. Serve with maple syrup if desired.

Rhubarb Delight

1 or 2 egg yolks
4 cups milk
1.3 cup quick-cooking tapioca
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 or 2 egg whites
1 teaspoon flavoring

Stewed rhubarb
Mix egg yolk with small amount of milk in top of double boiler. Add tapioca, sugar, salt and remaining milk. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook 10 to 12 minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently. Remove from fire. (Tapioca will be well distributed throughout, but mixture will be thin. Do not overcook.) Beat egg white until just stiff enough to hold shape. Fold hot tapioca mixture gradually into egg whites. Cool—mixture thickens as it cools. When slightly cool, stir in rhubarb, chill. Place sauce of cooked pink rhubarb in bottom of sherbet glasses; cover with tapioca. Garnish with cooked pink rhubarb.

Salmon Loaf

2 cups canned salmon, free from skin and bones
½ cup diced celery
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
½ teaspoon onion juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
6 tablespoons milk

Combine ingredients in order given. Turn into greased loaf pan, 7x3½x2½ inches. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) 40 minutes, or until well browned. Let stand 2 minutes before removing from pan. Serve with caper sauce. Serves 6.

Goldenrod Eggs

Blend thoroughly
¼ cup melted butter
¼ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
Pepper

Heat the mixture and add gradually one-half cup at a time, stirring after each addition to make a smooth sauce:
2 cups milk
Separate yolks and whites of:
4 hard-cooked eggs
Slice the whites and add to the prepared sauce. Pour sauce into unmolded spinach ring. Press the yolks through a coarse strainer to top the sauce. Garnish with paprika, parsley and lemon slices.

Canadian Garden Service 1939

By GORDON LINDSAY SMITH

are produced from top quality lawn grass mixtures, which contain proper proportions of the finer permanent grasses. Seed should be sown liberally and the ground fertilized. Rolling in the spring and watering regularly are also advisable.

Sometimes tree roots work up towards the surface simply because these are water there and none beneath. Heavy watering of lawns once a week rather than light daily sprinkles will prevent this danger and will also be best for the lawn itself. This treatment will keep grass a rich dark green and growing fast enough to crowd out the weeds. Patches of the latter in old lawns are usually a sure sign that soil is wearing out and needs fertilizing. In hot weather grass should not be cut as short nor as often as in the spring and fall.

No Hurry

The beginner is inclined to rush the season. It will not hurt to plant peas, spinach, lettuce or radish, just as soon as ground is ready, or sweet peas and flowers which naturally seed themselves. For the medium hardy type of plant however, there is no advantage whatever in sowing too soon. There is little growth in any case until the soil really turns warm. Gardeners are advised to divide their seed into at least three parts, sowing a third as soon as weather permits, a third a little later and the balance at the very tail-end of the planting season. In this way if frost does cut down the first batch there will be more plants coming on and the season will be lengthened by the last part of the garden sown.

Carefulness

For want of a nail the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe the horse was lost; and for want of a horse the rider was lost; being overtaken and slain by the enemy, all for want of care about a horseshoe nail.—Benjamin Franklin.

Ignorance

It is with narrow-minded people as with narrow-necked bottles—the less they have in them the more noise they make in pouring it out.—Pope.

A NEW KIND OF STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

THIS clever two-in-one combination of cake and strawberries not only suggests something new in strawberry shortcakes, but, because it is so delicate and delectable-to-eat, is the ideal dessert for Mother's Day.

STRAWBERRY BAVARIAN SHORTCAKE (Serves 9)

A one-egg cake (baked in a 9-inch, square loaf pan).

2 tablespoons gelatin
½ cup cold water
½ cup boiling water
¼ cup sugar
1½ cups crushed strawberries
1 cup whipping cream (whipped)

Turn out the baked cake, wash the pan, and replace cake in pan with 2 sheets of wax paper crossed in the bottom and extending out over the edges.

Soak gelatin in cold water. Add boiling water and sugar and stir until dissolved. Add crushed berries and chill until slightly thickened. Then fold in whipped cream and pour over cake. Chill until firm.

If one has a modern air-conditioned refrigerator, this dessert can be made safely in advance and stored until needed. The cold, properly moist, clean-washed air of the new ice refrigerator keeps foods fresh, with no danger of rapid drying out or exchanging of flavors. To serve, carefully lift out cake with the wax paper, remove the paper and garnish with whipped cream and whole, unstemmed strawberries.

The Legion Notice Board

We hear so much these days from professors attached to colleges and others, of the possibility of Canada remaining neutral in case of a war involving the Mother Country, that the following from our own magazine, "The Legionary", may prove enlightening:

"Can any person in his sane senses contemplate Canada interning British ships, British sailors and soldiers, refusing to send supplies to the Motherland? One of the first jobs of the Canadian Legion, in the fantastic event of carrying out this neutrality, would be to send nearly half of its membership to internment camps! Our Imperial comrades would have to be restrained, as reservists, from re-joining their regiments. The military instructors attached to the Permanent Force, the naval personnel exchanged from the Royal Navy to the Royal Canadian Navy would have to be marched off to internment. Canadian ships of British registry, like the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's "Empress" liners, would have to be interned if, as is likely, they were converted into armed merchantmen. Canadians in the armed forces of the United Kingdom would be liable to criminal prosecution under the Foreign Enlistment Act. And all this fantastic nonsense is to be contemplated while the Canadians are continuing to sing "God Save the King". It may be that for greater security the royal family would be sent to Canada during the period of the war. To carry the functions of neutrality to its most logical absurdity, Canada might perhaps be required to intern even His Majesty the King, since the Sovereign is Monarch of not only Canada but of the United Kingdom!"

Mr. Beattie Wallace is home now from his variety studies, having completed his exams for the term.

Mrs. W. Bloom was a visitor to the city at week end and accompanied by her daughter Lillian, who has finished her term at the university.
